29 TERMS OF REFERENCE SCOPE OF WORK

29.1 Background

As part of the Environmental Sustainability Plan, uMngeni-uThukela Water (UW) is in the process of undertaking a number of initiatives including a feasibility study for the implementation of hybrid and electric vehicles (EVs). This initiative is a crucial step in assessing the viability and potential benefits of transitioning to hybrid and EVs in as part of the Organisation's operations.

By addressing these objectives in the feasibility study, UW can make informed decisions about the potential benefits and challenges of transitioning to hybrid and EVs and develop a well-structured plan for a sustainable and environmentally friendly fleet.

29.2 Description of goods/ services required.

The objectives of such a feasibility study would typically include:

Assess Cost-Benefit Analysis: Determine the potential cost savings and benefits of adopting electric vehicles compared to traditional internal combustion engine (ICE) vehicles. This should include considerations for vehicle purchase costs, operational costs (fuel, maintenance), and any available incentives or tax credits for EV adoption.

Environmental Impact Assessment: Evaluate the environmental benefits of using EVs, such as reduced carbon emissions and lower air pollution. Estimate the reduction in greenhouse gas emissions and other pollutants that can be achieved by transitioning to EVs.

Infrastructure Analysis: Examine the current charging infrastructure in the U service area, Identify any gaps in charging infrastructure and estimate the cost and feasibility of installing additional charging stations to support EVs.

Vehicle Suitability: Determine which types of vehicles in the organization's fleet are suitable for electrification. Consider factors such as vehicle range, payload capacity, and duty cycles to select the right EV models.

Energy Supply and Sources: Assess the availability and sustainability of the energy supply needed to charge EVs. Analyse the potential use of renewable energy sources like solar or wind power for charging infrastructure to reduce the carbon footprint.

Operational Impact: Analyse how the transition to EVs will affect daily operations. Consider factors like vehicle range, charging times, and any potential disruptions during the transition period.

Financial Viability: Evaluate the financial feasibility of the transition, including the return on investment (ROI) and payback period for EVs compared to conventional vehicles. Consider long-term cost projections and potential financial risks.

Regulatory and Policy Analysis: Review relevant local, regional, and national regulations, incentives, and policies related to EV adoption. Identify any incentives, tax breaks, or grants available to support the implementation of EVs.

Stakeholder Engagement: Engage with key stakeholders, including employees, customers, and local communities, to gather feedback and address concerns related to the adoption of EVs.

Risk Assessment: Identify potential risks and challenges associated with EV adoption, such as technological limitations, supply chain issues, and market volatility, and develop mitigation strategies.

Timeline and Implementation Plan: Develop a detailed timeline and implementation plan for the transition to EVs, including vehicle procurement, charging infrastructure installation, and employee training.

Alternative Scenarios: Consider alternative scenarios, such as hybrid vehicles or hydrogen fuel cell vehicles, to determine if they might be more suitable or cost-effective for specific use cases within UUW.

Monitoring and Evaluation: Establish key performance indicators (KPIs) and a monitoring framework to track the progress and success of the EV adoption over time.

To conclude the feasibility assessment, a comprehensive Multi-Criteria Decision Analysis Model to be developed. MCDA for selecting an electric vehicle should cover the Definition of the various Objectives and Criteria, Weight the Criteria, Gather Data, Normalized Data, Score the Options, Aggregated Scores, Sensitivity Analysis, Visualized Results, Option Selection, Uncertainty assessment and Review of the Model.

The structured MCDA decision-making process should allow UUW to make informed choices based on multiple criteria.

29.3 Deliverables/Key Outcomes.

A feasibility study report is the main deliverable. It must contain a comprehensive analysis and evaluation of the practicality, viability, and potential success of alternative fleet options. The primary purpose of a feasibility study is to assess whether the proposed endeavour is worth pursuing by examining various aspects such as technical, economic, operational, legal, scheduling, and market-related factors.

Feasibility studies are essential tools for decision-makers and stakeholders to make informed choices about whether to invest resources (financial, time, and effort) into a particular project or business venture. They help identify potential challenges and opportunities, allowing for adjustments to be made before committing to the project.
